

Amalgamated Life Medical Stop Loss Insurance— The Essential, Excess Insurance

Now more than ever before, Medical Stop Loss Insurance is essential. Healthcare costs continue to outpace inflation. New prohibitions on lifetime limits on benefits have been introduced by The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Additionally, the costs of hospitalization, various medical procedures and advanced technologies are skyrocketing. Add to this our aging population and increased incidence of chronic diseases. To protect against potentially catastrophic losses, organizations must take a hard look at their medical stop loss coverage and make certain their coverage is everything it should be.

For self-funded groups which cover over 50% of all insured workers, the perils of not having the right Medical Stop Loss Insurance are even greater. One employee's catastrophic claim could potentially deplete an organization's entire medical reserves, require even more funding or worse yet, place your organization in dire financial straits.
